SUCCEEDS IN TAKING HIS LIFE

Andrew Adams, the Waiter Who Slashed Mrs. Gerald With a Razor, Commits Suicide in a Bath Tub at Holy Cross Hospital.

B Y THROWING himself into a bath-tub, taking the spigot in his mouth and turning the water on full force, Andrew Adams, the waiter full force, Andrew Adams, the waiter who tried to kill Mrs. Gerald and then himself, finally succeeded in ending his own life at the Holy Cross hospital last evening. Adams made repeated futile. attempts to kill himself after butcher-ing Mrs. Gerald, but was foiled in each one until yesterday. He was discovered then within three minutes after mak-ing the attempt, but when reached he was dead.

Only that morning he had declared to his doctor that he would yet accomplish his destruction, and his determination finally brought success. His action was entirely unlooked for, especially at that time, as he was preparing to go into the city to attend to some matters of personal interest, and a carriage was waiting at the door for him when he committed the deed.
Yesterday morning Dr. Beer allowed the patient to get out of bed and walk around the hospital attended by a man to look after him. Early in the afternoon Adams informed the doctor that he wanted to go to his room down town to get some things he had there, and giving the doctor his keys, told him to bring him some clothing. The doctor took these things to him and promised to return at 6 o'clock with a carriage to convey him to his room.

"I secured an officer to accompany me and reached the hospital about ten minutes to 6. I saw Adams standing at the window of his ward looking at minutes to 6. I saw Adams standing at the window of his ward looking with the hospital, and I went upstairs. I saw someone walking towards the bath room, but did not notice who it was, and turned to see another patient who was being brought in.

"Not three minutes later I heard a scream from one of the sisters and rushed to the bath room. She had passed by and, hearing the water running, peeped in. She saw a man lying across the tub with the spigot in his mouth and the water running at full force. It was dark in the room. She sized him by the neck and felt the bandages. That told her it was Adams, and she screamed. She was unable to pull him away from the tub, and I dragged him out. He was dead when I got him on the floor. He had drowned himself by filling his whole body with water.

"He had simply watched his chance, and, slipping into the bath room, did the deed so quickly that no one could save him. It was only this morning that he told me he was going to the realized that it was all off with him and he did not propose to give up until he accomplished what he started to do."

Mrs. Gerald Say It is the Best.

The news of Adams' tragic fate was carried to Mrs. Gerald in her room. She listened to it with evident regret, but only remarked:

"Well, I guess it is the best thing for all concerned. I am sorry that he had to do it in that way, but if he
